HOW HARVIE BLAIR WORKED A SMOOTH GAME IN RICHMOND.

He is of the Religious Type_A Check for over $800 Was Indorsed by a Business Man of This City.

Richmond has another genuine sensation, and this time a fakir of the shrewd order, and representing himself to be a prominent wealthy business man and retired journalist, has skipped to the tune of $816,20, leaving that amount for a prominent business man of this city to pay.

It will be remembered that a man giving his name as J. Harvie Blair came to this city about a year ago, and identified himself with the Good Templars of this city, representing himself to be prominently connected with that organization elsewhere. He went away, and did not return until the first of last March, when he appeared in the city again, and registered at Ford's Hotel as J. Harvie Blair, where he remained for three or four

He then left Ford's and engaged apartments at Ill north Sixth street, a boarding house, where Mr. H. C. Burnett, cashier of the First National Bank, of this city, also boards.

Mr. Burnett met the man at the breakfast table, a few days after the latter came to his boarding-house. Up to the 20th of March Blair talked of scarcely anything except his connection with the Christian Endeavor cause, and some personal matters. Soon afterwards, how-ever, he began to foreshadow possible transactions through the First National Bank, dropping incidental remarks about his business connections elsewhere, Among his statements in this conection he mentioned that he was associated in an official capacity with the Consolidated Brush Company, of Chicago. Later on Mr. Burnett, by some adroitness, ascer-tained that Blair claimed to be the vicepresident of the above-named company. With this leading statement the cashler, With this leading statement the cashier, who had a peculiar mistrust of the man, becam on the Sist of March to hunt the fellow up. He mentioned his suspicions to President Boulware, of the First National Bank, and the latter gentleman, who had met Blair, and had a talk with him, agreed with the cashier in his impressions of the stranger. Mr. Burnett then wrote to the American Exchange then wrote to the American Exchange National Bank, of Chicago, in reference National Bank, of Chicago, in reference to the man, and apprised President Boulware of what he had done. A reply from the Chicago bank stated that parties in the Pork City never heard of the man, who was evidently a fraud. Another telegram was sent to Chicago, stating that Blair claimed to be the vice-president and auditor of the Consolidated Brush Company, and that he carried the letter-heads of that company, and a reply was reof that company, and a reply was re-ceived, stating that the Consolidated ceived, stating that the Consolidated Brush Company had no vice-president. Several other communications passed between the Richmond cashier and business organizations with which Blair claimed to be associated, and all doubt that the man was a fakir soon vanished from the minds of the First National Bank officials.

Meanwhile Blair made himself particularly agreeable to Mr. Burnett, showing a number of attentions and courtesies to that gentleman when he was unwell, spent money freely, and had wonderful stories to relate of zome of his prominent friends, among them ev Mayor Belly, of stories to relate of some of his prominent friends, among them ex-Mayor Babb, of Minneapolis, who were coming to Rich-mond to settle, and would invest largely in Virginia. The sum of $10,000 was to be brought here, to be followed soon by much larger amounts, all of which was to be deposited in the First National Bank.

During this time Blair was by no means idle. He displayed much energy and en-thusiasm in the Good Templar circles of thusiasm in the Good Templar circles of Richmond. A vacancy recently occurring on the Good Templar board to erect Trinity Temple in this city, which, as already stated in The Times, is to cost $50,000, Blair was unanimously elected to the vacancy.

Blair claimed to be a representative of a Christian organization, and, having been highly recommended by a prominent clerayman of Norfolk, soon succeeded in identifying himself closely with the Christian Endeavor organizations of this city. He was a brilliant conversationalist, and about his manner was an earnest, sincere air, which could not fail to have a marked effect. He soon began to lead marked effect. He soon began to lead religious services, and made earnest addresses in Manchester and Petersburg, as well as in Richmond. His prayers as wer as in Rechmond. His prayers were offered in a peculiarly earnest manner, and when the question of donations arose he proved himself very liberal.

When an effort was made to furnish a parlor for the Christian Endeavor Society of the Centenary Methodist church, he collected to hear the entire expense.

volunteered to bear the entire expense of the carpet, and after making addresses advocating the extension policy of the work, agreed to pay the expenses of a man to go into the field as a missionary of the cause. For this purpose he offered to give the society of Centenary church his check for $159. His offer was accepted. The man's familiarity with the Bible was remarkable. When he lead class meetings he used a Bible with passages marked, and his ability to turn to certain marked, and his about to turn to certain passages on short notice was generally noticed. His familiarity with Christian work was more than ordinary, and it was only a short time ere he had gained a prominent place in the esteem of the Christian Endeavor people in this city. At Centenary church a beautiful reception was tendered him, and not a shadow of suspicion arose in connection with his character until a day or two since.

Blair's case was put in the hands of Major Poe, and the facts in the case given to that official. The Chief of Police went to the First National Bank Monday morning about 19 0'clock, and Blair was at that time in conversation with some of the bank officials, having just asked them to cash a draft for $2,132.47, pur-porting to be drawn by the Citizens' Bank of Northfield, Minn., on the American Exchange National Bank of New York. The cashier told Blair they would take his draft for collection only. Major Poe and the bank officials examined the draft and found it apparently all right A telegram was sent to the Northfield bank. An answer was received, stating that the draft was a forgery. Major Poe was notified, and asked to have the man arrested on sight. After leaving the bank Monday morning Blair went to the Exchange Hotel and engaged rooms at $50 per day for was the the party of capitalists. It was the story of these cup talists that caused Major Poe to relax his vigilance, for when he wired Minneapolis Monday, ask-ing if ex-Mayor Babb was in the city, the answer came that he was not in town, having left for Washington, and would be in Norfolk Wednesday. This agreed exactly with Blair's statement. During Blair's efforts in behalf of the Christian Endeavor movement mention-ed above he won the esteem of a wellknown business man of this city and a promient member of that organization. So much impressed was this gentleman with Blair that when latter asked him to indorse a check for $816.20, that he might get the money on it his request was readily granted. The check purported to have been drawn by the Northfield National Bank on the Chase National Bank of New York, payable to the order of J. Harvie Blair. The check was cashed, and of the money received 15th was given to the Christian. eceived $150 was given to the Christian Endeavor Society. It was soon ascer-tained by the officers of the Merchants' National Bank that this check, like the draft, was a forgery. Blair was seen at the Exchange Hotel about 6 o'clock alonday afternoon. He stated that he was going to Norfolk. Major Poe and Sergeant Alexander Tomlinson went to Norfolk Tuesday afternoon, and returned yesterday evening about 7 o'clock, but they did not bring the seveted prize with them. His whereabouts are unknown, but it is believed he has made a hasty retreat towards the North. Here the matter rests for the
